New Perspectives

Some people might think Yearbook class is only about taking pictures and dumping them onto a page in a book. What they fail to realize is that each picture captures a memory of a moment and tells our story. Most kids enroll in a nine week class that includes work with photography, graphic design, and writing. Others decide to stay a second quarter and work through the frustration of editing and revising their pages.

Building a page requires a broad range of skills. It starts with taking good quality photographs. Students must learn to adapt to their surroundings and understand every aspect of their camera. Capturing an event as it unfolds requires planning and poise. Next, yearbook staff must tackle the graphic design of a page. With the immense number of pages in the yearbook, everyone is encouraged to use their creativity to build unique layouts. The last element students complete for their pages are the written captions and feature articles. Each student must do the job of a reporter, which involves conducting interviews and investigating the facts behind a story. Whether it's an individual, a team, or a club, the yearbook is a collaborative creation.

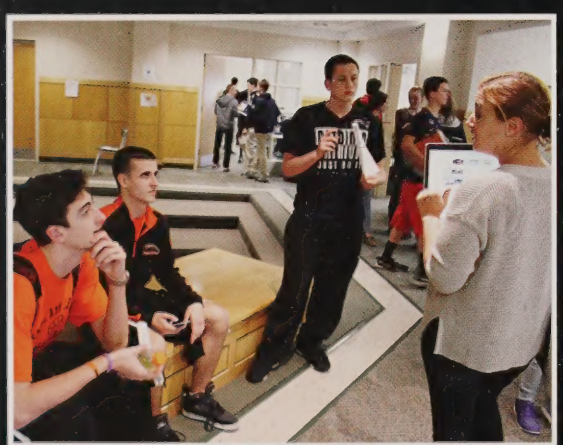
Faculty...

Mr. Chmura poses for a mug shot inside the Junior spirit week wall. Back in his classroom, he fills his lessons with experiments and games, making learning fun.

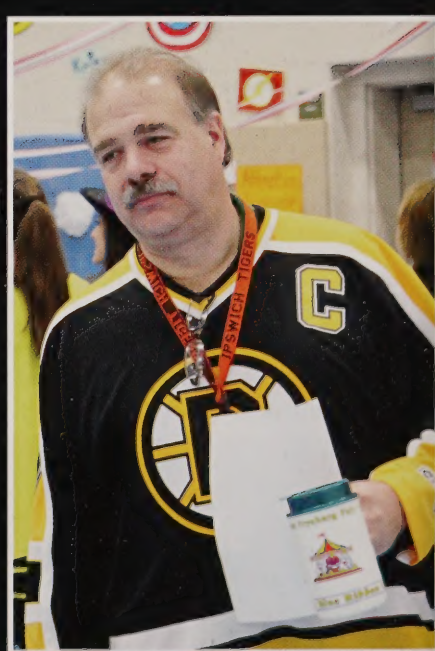
Mrs. Hoyle thrives in her natural habitat. She is an amazing teacher and friendly to everyone. She always finds ways to make learning fun and exciting for all her students.

Mr. Sargent spends way too much time playing Fantasy Football! He loves engaging in discussion with kids, and talking about books and big ideas. Believe it or not, Mr. Sargent grew up on a dairy farm with Holstein cows!



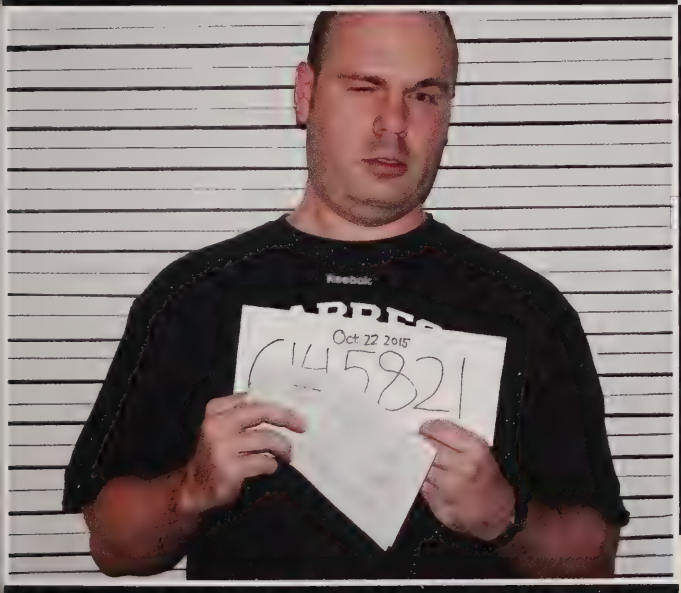
Mrs. McShane treats her students how she would want her children to be treated. She loves to read and spend time with her friends, family, and of course her boys!

Mr. Ames can't live without his cup of coffee. His addiction has grown so much that he has to carry it around with him each and every morning. He's an accomplished teacher who has motivated many students to success.



Mr. Kreiger and Liam Sullivan watch the bat spin relay race during Spirit Week. A veteran history teacher, his classes require a lot of responsibility and effort to help prepare us for the real world.

Mr. Hughes likes teaching math because he believes mathematical problems apply to all facets of life. He loves meeting new students every year and enjoys making a positive impact in different students' lives.



Above: Mr. Dalton passes the mic off to Sofia Gadbois moments before she sang her heart out during the Spirit Week musical competition for the 4th year in a row. To this day, everyone still can't believe how such a strong and amazing voice comes from this little girl.

Below: Mrs. Panciera does everything she can to help out her students. She's considered a "favorite" of many a student. Her great sense of style and upbeat personality get everyone through the day. She really "gets us" as students because of her own high school age daughter.

Mr. Pleines takes a turn in the mug shot booth during Spirit Week. His style of teaching and unique sense of humor make taking his classes a must have experience. His dry sarcasm and sharp wit fill his students' minds with knowledge and laughter every day.

Will It Be Easy? Nope. Worth It? Absolutely.

The Ipswich Tigers Football teams have always been hard working. But this team in particular, is different. This team has only 7 seniors, and a roster full of young players. With a new set of young coaches, these Tigers were suppose to have another tough season. "He has some basics ideas, but they are very effective," said Co-Captain, Josh Brown when asked about their new head coach, Kevin Fessette. The Tigers changed their whole offense at the start of the season; "I really enjoy it. The offense is mean and aggressive. It's very effective with our low numbers," said Co-Captain Alex Morris. So many people doubted this team because of their past and low numbers, but they were destined to prove every single hater wrong. The Tigers needed to win their last three regular season games to make the playoffs. For a team that hasn't seen the playoffs since 2006, this was no easy task. The Tigers met their goal, winning all three of those games against Amesbury, Manchester-Essex, and Georgetown. The 2015 Ipswich Tigers had a season none of them will ever forget.

5. Senior co-captain Jake Long quickly releases a pass before the Amesbury defense can get to him.
6. Junior running back, Bill Waiswilos gets tripped up for a first down.
7. Junior quarterback, Shane Grady, releases a pass against Newburyport.
8. Junior defensive end, Bill Koshivas finds a fumble in a group of opponents.
9. Junior running back Charlie Gillis is too quick for a Newburyport linebacker.
10. Senior co-captain Josh Brown chases after the quarterback.
11. Junior linebacker Bill Waiswilos jumps up to attempt to block a field goal.
12. Junior outside linebacker Christian Neuenfeldt & Sophomore Tommy Herron fight for a ball against Amesbury.
13. The Tigers defense crowds the line of scrimmage against Newburyport.
14. Senior co-captain Josh Brown sacks the Newburyport quarterback.

Tougher Than the Competition

One word to describe this team? Cohesive - forming a united whole. Over the last two years the Ipswich Varsity Cheerleading team has lost some members to graduation, while others have quit. Currently, there are eleven members on the competition team. Dropping from eighteen to eleven members has required a lot of adjustment. In spite of their ups and downs, no matter what comes at them the girls find their way around it.

Ipswich Varsity has been a strong team that keeps building on itself every year. The team wants to maintain a successful legacy by keeping up the hard work and pushing themselves. "I felt like our team was more ready than ever this year at CALs to win our 5th consecutive title, and I am proud to be part of IHS cheerleading," said Issy Cerundolo. Championships don't come easy but these girls put up a fight to earn them. The girls proved hard work is worth it at CAL's this year, which were held at North Reading High School on November 5.

Three's Company

Juniors Nick DiBello and Connor Fauske run with newcomer senior Sam Duffield along the Ipswich home course at the Crane Estate. Duffield started his first year in Cross Country as a senior after knee surgery and issues with his right thigh. This season, Sam has bounced back and set his fastest race time at twenty minutes and one second. When asked about how the team's season was going, Sam said "I think we gel really well. The stronger people help the weaker runners and we encourage everybody to run their hardest." Sam continued by saying "We try to make everyone feel welcome and even though it is a casual sport, we try our hardest in the meets." Sam describes his recovery from his surgery as slow and frustrating, but now he has made a full recovery and can hold his own on the course. Sam has shown incredible perseverance this season and adds in conclusion, "It's a great team. Next year, the runners that are already strong are going to be even stronger and its going to be fun to see."

Going The Distance

Seniors Caitlyn Scola and Emily DeMarco run together during a meet against Georgetown at their home course. This year, Emily has done a lot to prepare for the Cross Country season, "I did a summer training camp. I increased my mileage more for this season running 55-60 miles and doing a lot of double runs." Emily joined Cross Country because "I realized I was really bad at soccer and the only part of soccer that I liked was the running part." This year Emily hit her best mile time at five minutes and two seconds, and a two mile run at ten minutes and fifty nine seconds. Although Emily has been dealing with an iron deficiency this season she has persevered through it, making great times on many courses, including her hardest course, Patton Park. Although it was a successful senior year, from Emily's perspective she has only just left the starting line.

Not Your Average Water Boys

Few members of Ipswich High School don't know either of the Waters brothers. Most know Kellen for his cute and adorable bubbliness, and Cam for his notorious "bad boy" attitude. In this case, like so many families, opposites seem to attract. A family consisting of three brothers and one sister, all of the siblings are in some way involved with soccer. "It has always been a big part of our family. With everyone playing, it really brought us all together," said Kellen. Cam added that "Our entire family loves to encourage each other on and off the field to do better in both aspects of both soccer and life in general." When asked if they liked playing with each other enough to do it again, Cam said "Yes, because sports and competition give us a deeper connection, which creates a deeper relationship." Even though they have opposite personalities, both have love for the game and each other, bringing them closer together.

Sibling Greatness

Junior Jocelyn Long is a stand out player this year for the Ipswich Tigers. Her hard work and dedication has made her the player she is today. As with most of us, she started with Ipswich Youth Soccer.

"My older sister Courtney motivated me to play soccer when I was young. I honestly didn't like playing that much when I first tried out, but when she started to achieve greatness I wanted to be just like her. So I stuck with it, and now I can thank her for introducing me to the sport I love."

When asked if there is anyone on her current team that she admires, Jocelyn said: "Anyone who shows me greatness will motivate me to be better. Whether it's one person or the whole team, it doesn't matter. I also still greatly appreciate my sister's advice. She is one of my biggest teachers both on and off the field."

In order for the team to achieve greatness next year Jocelyn hopes: "To bring leadership and encouragement so that my teammates have the will to play with heart and determinaton. As an individual player, I will strive for my own greatness by playing to my very best potential. Always."

A Bittersweet Goodbye

Ms. Merullo's arrival at Ipswich High School was one perhaps the best thing to happen to the Ipswich Field Hockey Program in a long time. As her first four years of coaching come to end, they mark an important milestone: the class of 2016 will be her first players to graduate. Needless to say, their 2015 field hockey season came to an emotional end.

Coach Merullo has led the field hockey team to tournament every year since she has been here. Merullo pushed the girls, transofrming the program into one of the top in the league. The 2015 season was one of the best so far.

This season Merullo brought the team to the quarter finals where the they lost to Triton, the third seed in the Cape Ann League. "We beat them during the regular season and they were out to get us. We were their first loss of the season and they wanted revenge," said Emma Moulton. Ipswich suffered a one-nothing loss, with the one goal scored more than half way through the second half.

In spite of the hard work and post season struggles, the team has formed a unique bond with Merullo that other teams long for. "I wasn't close to a lot of the girls in the field hockey program, but now I feel like I've known them all forever," said former soccer player Chloe, who joined the team junior year.

As a result of their success and Merullo's charismatic leadership, many new faces want to be part of the field hockey program Merullo has built.

Well Below Par

Although the IHS Tigers golf team began the 2015 season in the sand traps, they finished in a positive place because of support from team captains, William Wallace, Kilian Morrissey and Jackson Maino. Even though juniors Morrissey and Maino will return to build upon their experience next year, they have big shoes to fill with the loss of senior Will Wallace, who brought his phenomenal short game to the course.

William's story is truly an entertaining one. He was introduced to golf on his seventh birthday after he received a set of Top Flite XL clubs from his grandmother. Although he may have not shown a lot of enthusiasm at first, his dad steered him in the right direction and Will's interest and skill began to grow. As with a lot of beginners, Will had trouble hitting consistently and gaining distance, which he still continues to improve upon. 'Now I play on a much more competitive level and gauge my success on how many points I can make in a round rather than just my ability to reach the green," said Will. Despite the early start for his golf career, it wasn't until high school Will began playing golf competitively, which was a big adjustment for him.

Overall Will has had a really great experience with the Ipswich team. Will's personality makes him the kind of player who takes himself off the team's roster for a match to focus on his personal performance so he can be on his game next time. Players like Will make a big contribution to the team and help lead the team to the tourney like they did during the 2015 season. Hopefully the younger players can take the reigns and continue the Tigers' streak of success.

Volleyball Strikes

Due to the success and determination of the 2015 JV volleyball team, the girls are ready to serve, bump, and strike into a new varsity sport offered at IHS next year. This shouldn't only excite the girls, but also the community. The development of the volleyball team has created many opportunities for athletes, officials, and coaches.

The Serve: Kerri O'Connor and Lole Ivanov, having great dedication to the sport of volleyball, brought the idea for a new volleyball program to the school board and athletic department three years ago. O'Connor and Ivanov were allowed to start a middle school/high school volleyball club team in 2013. The club began to grow, gathering many interested and newly excited athletes. Because of their club status, the team had to rely on many donations. Fortunately, our generous community was more than supportive.

The Bump: After two years of club status the girls were bumped up to an IHS JV volleyball team this season. This fall, 2015, IHS had their very first IHS interscholastic volleyball team.

The Set: Striking big this season, the girls were able to show just how successful they could be when given the opportunity. As a team, the girls ended their season with a winning record after playing 7 different north shore high schools - demonstrating how volleyball could be successful at IHS.

The Score: With a winning season behind them, the hugely successful ' 15-' 16 team has finally risen above the net and scored varsity level status approval for 2016. The returning girls have more opportunities to pursue as they build their skills at the varsity level, giving IHS one more team and program to be proud of.

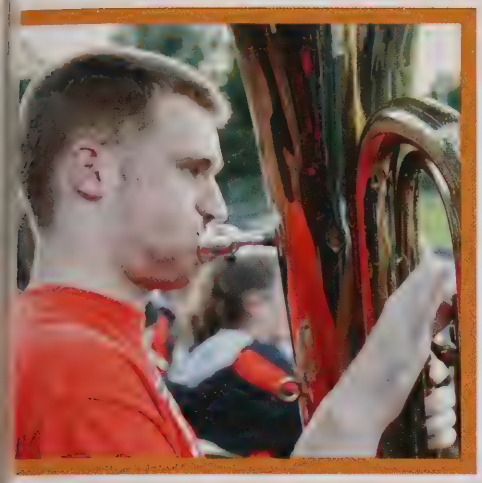
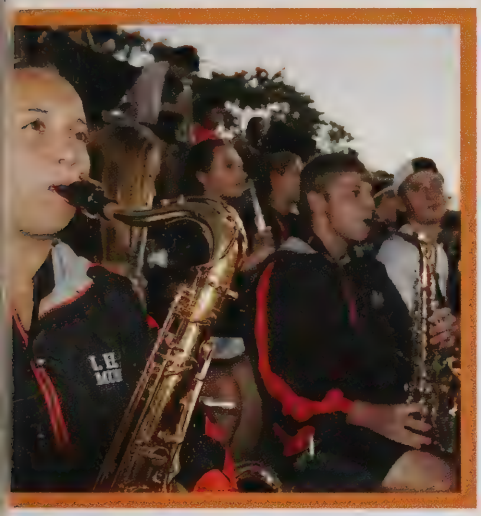
Pep Band



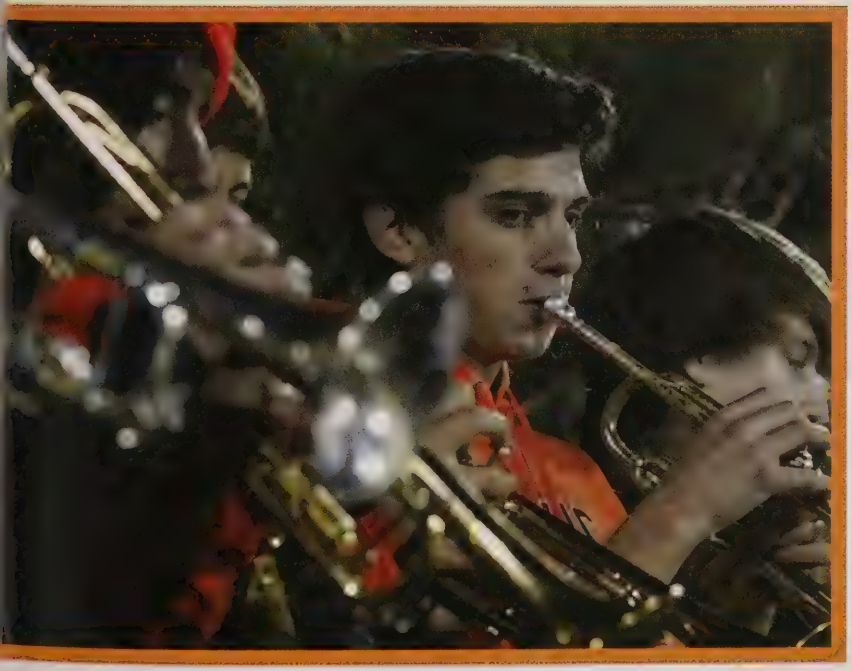


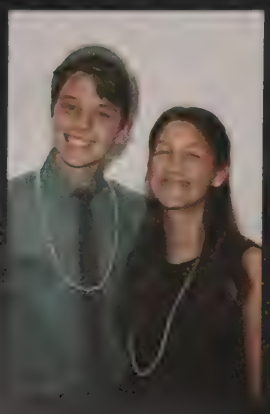
Carrying the Family Tradition

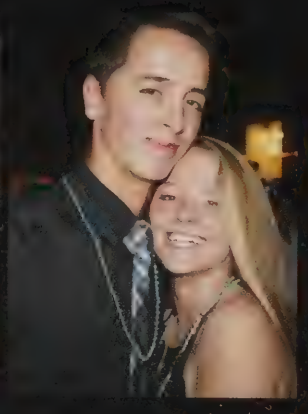
Philip Meneghini comes from a family of musicians. This made it an easy decision to join the school band. He followed in his father's footsteps by playing that same instrument, the trumpet. One of his favorite parts of pep band is getting to tease the trombone section, which includes his brother Spencer. Philip has said he is proud to provide the strongest support for the football team."

Purple Trombone

Ben Hogan has been playing trombone for school since the fourth grade. Through his years of hard work he has made himself a great asset to the Ipswich Pep Band. According to him, "it's relaxed and the music is fun to play." His friend Luca Cassano, a trumpet player, added that "it's fun to root for the team and play music, whether they win or lose."







Reflections of...

New Year, New Peers

On October 17th, freshmen through seniors gathered in the lower gym at the Ipswich High School. As homecoming is the first high school dance for many freshmen, it was weird for older siblings to see their younger sibling classmates out on the dance floor with them. Ellis Roesler, who's younger brother Nicholas attended the dance said it was "different seeing him at Homecoming but it was fun!"

Method to the Madness

Insane. Exhilarant. Exciting. All are words that describe the part of American high school culture known as spirit week. To the unknowing bystander, spirit week seems pointless. How could a week of students dressing up in ridiculous outfits, competing in games, and missing classes have any purpose, especially when the seniors always win? To students, spirit week is a whole lot more. Besides the obvious excuse to miss classes and dig out our American flag suspenders, spirit week is a time where the student population comes together to show pride for their school. It also gives each class an opportunity to work together as a cohesive group to achieve a common goal: to outwit and surpass competing grades. For the inexperienced freshmen, this is a mountain to climb. "I remember our class being completely unorganized freshman year," says senior Julia Kennedy, "the class officers seemingly made all of the decisions and no one was motivated to do anything." But, as the years go on, classmates develop a sense of unity with each other. For most classes, this seems to click between sophomore and junior year. "I think junior year is the year where the class wants to give the seniors a run for their money even though they know their not going to win," says senior Maddi Pitcairn. Forgetting the points, the games and the outfits, spirit week is when individuals become part of a grade, and each grade becomes part of a school. Whether it's through raising money for charity or winning silly competitions, bringing a school together is what spirit week is all about.

Peak Performance

Indoor events is often a favorite day among the students. The energy from spirit week is definitely at its highest when the entire school is gathered together in the gym to motivate their classmates in each event. Seniors dominate spirit week. Everybody knows it. Whether it's during an event or the wall decoration, the seniors take spirit to a whole new level. It makes sense though. With three years of experience under their belts, and the fact that this will be their last, why wouldn't they? As senior Julia Kennedy put it, "It's like the Senior Week before Senior Week." Even though they know they're likely to win, nothing stops them from putting everything they have into the week. Achieving New Heights

Isn't always about being tall. The IHS Boys Basketball team is extremely short coming into the 2015-2016 season carrying only two players over six feet. But this definitely isn't going to stop them from playing with their hearts every single game.

"Height doesn't matter, it's the skill that you need," said Coach Laroche, a successful college basketball player himself. Even today, he often shows his skill in practice when he guards some of the taller players on the team like Pete Pappas and Kyle Walker.

Whether short or tall, all players truly believed this season should be about overcoming the odds. As a result, their motto has become "Carpe Diem" honoring Doug Woodworth. Most also believe that this year's motto will honor a true Tiger and a supportive fan, John Yeannakopoulos. "Yean," as he is affectionately known by his colleagues and students, fought and beat cancer several times over the years until he finally succumbed to the disease this year. We will remember him as the Ipswich super fan who enjoyed every moment until the day that he passed.

On the court, field, or even in the hospital, Coach Woodworth and Mr. Yean always had a smile on their faces. Honoring Coach Woodworth and Mr. Yean, the team plans to play their hearts out all season long. "We are going to play every moment like it's our last, and of course we will have fun doing it," said senior captain Jake Long.

Grace Under Pressure

In late October 2015 the NBA Timberwolves team lost their coach Flip Saunders to Hodgkin's Lymphoma. Flip was an outstanding coach, leading his team to the playoffs for eight consecutive seasons. NBA commissioner Adam Silver said, "Flip's untimely passing has left a gaping hole in the fabric of our league. Flip was a beloved figure around the NBA, who demonstrated a genuine and consistent passion for his players, his team and the game."

Much like the tear in the fabric of the NBA, the Ipswich Community has had to bear the burden of grief this winter due to the loss of Doug Woodworth. Doug Woodworth was the Ipswich High School girl's varsity coach who was loved by many. The girls quickly realized that not only would they have to continue playing without one of their most beloved coaches, but they would have to adapt quickly to their new coach Jim Burfoot.

Coach Burfoot wasn't going to let his new team fall apart. He wanted to make the best out of a horrible situation. When asked about their new coach, Rachel Jaeger claimed "He worked us hard and got us into shape really fast. He definitely knows what he's doing." Jim knows the girls have the ability and skills to be great and he is trying to keep them going in spite of their loss.

For now the Tigers are focusing on how they can improve their skills and show their ability to win games. Captain Kendall Trepanier says, "One of our greatest challenges is playing as a whole and working as one unit to win games. We also need to play hard and give it our all for the entire game." Although the team needs some time to rebuild their offensive skills they are a very strong team on their defensive side, holding aggressive teams to less than 40 points.

Although both the Timberwolves and the Tigers may not have the most impressive records, they are showing their determination to play hard. Both coaches taught their teams to never give up no matter what the circumstances, and both teams continue to persevere throughout their season.

Finding the Right Stroke

Being a member of the swim team is not like being part of most teams. Swimmers don't need special equipment, can't pass the ball to a teammate, and never score a goal at the buzzer. However, unlike other sports, they must compete against the clock while submerged in water.

Swimming is a complicated sport that requires a year round training regimen to compete at the highest levels. For many swimmers this means they choose an event in which they specialize. Perfecting one's technique takes a lifetime.

Longtime swimmer and senior captain Jackie Bouvier hopes to swim her way into both sectionals and states this year. For Jackie, freestyle is "My favorite stroke because in the longer races it gives me more time." Finding your best stroke using it well is necessary for the success of every swimmer's routine. Starting the season off in the right lane with a record of 5-1, the swim team has secured a winning record and hopes maintain their pace through the last few meets.

Girls Indoor Track

Record Speed, Legendary Endurance

For some athletic programs, being over 500 is an accomplishment. Most would consider a team undefeated over many seasons a dynasty. While the Ipswich Girls Track Team hasn't been called a dynasty yet, they are well on their way to becoming one with an astonishing record of 49-1 over the last 5 seasons. This includes 5 consecutive CAL championship victories and four school records. This season, the team hopes to continue their dominance within the league. This dominance, like many other great things, comes from the heart of the team and a tradition of excellence.

As a team captain, Michaela Hedderman has established herself amongst the elite since entering the league as a freshman in the 2012 indoor track season. In her outstanding four year career, Michaela is undefeated in both the 300 meter race in indoor track and the 400 meter in outdoor track. 'It took an immense amount of hard work every day to get to where I am today," said Hedderman. The only problem with athletes having such success is that sometimes they may grow overconfident. Luckily for the girls track team, Michaela doesn't have this problem. 'I always feel nervous before every race, otherwise I wouldn't be mentally ready and wouldn't do as well."

Another huge key to the team's success has been senior captain, Emily DeMarco. Throughout her career, Emily has been a distance running juggernaut, setting three school records in her junior year. 'My goal for this year was to re-break all three of my records. To me that would be a huge achievement," said DeMarco. Just like her teammate Michaela, Emily has worked extremely hard every day to get to where she is now. 'Really all it takes is the ability to work hard day in and day out, knowing that doing the little things can really go a long way."

It is clear "dominance" isn't a good enough word to truly capture what the girls track team has accomplished. Their success will definitely continue as long as the up and coming athletes follow the same principles: Hard work, dedication and the will to keep going when everything else seems against you.

Throwing the Distance

When people think of track, they typically think of running and jumping. Few think of throwing. But that's not the case when it comes to shot put. Shot put is an event where someone throws a very heavy ball as far as possible. For seniors Josh Brown, Cam Waters, Jayson Galoski, and Dan Lonergan, shot put is their main event. Shot put wasn't the first option for Josh. After wrestling his freshman year, he quickly realized it wasn't for him. "I remember feeling out of place on the mat. I looked around and everyone seemed to know exactly what they were doing," said Josh. That's when he tried indoor track and picked up a shot put for this first time. "I knew this was the right event for me because I wasn't feeling the whole running part of track. Lol," said Josh. Shortly after that, Josh became a shot put all-star.

Last Year, Josh was 3rd in the Cape Ann league for shot put. This year, Josh is in 1st place, and won CAL track athlete of the year with a longest distance of 47 feet and 8 inches. As he progressed many others started to follow after Josh. Seniors Jay Galoski and Cam Waters both signed up for shot put the following year. When asked why he chose shot put, Cam replied: "Josh convinced me to do shot put doing outdoor track my sophomore year. To be honest, I was't sure how I was going to like throwing a heavy ball as a game, but I realized how competitive it can be. Also, I love improving my distance every day I'm out there." After improving his throw to thirty five feet last year, Cam hopes to throw farther this year.

Senior Jay Galoski signed up sophomore year as well, and looks to improve his throws every day. "My longest throw is almost 43 feet, but I hope to reach over 45 feet when outdoor track starts back up," Jay said.

The last, but not least senior to join shot put was Dan Lonergan, who signed up this year. When asked why he chose to throw shot put, he said, "Josh and I were teammates during football and he used to tell me about throwing shot put from time to time. I didn't know what I was going to do for a sport during the winter, so I asked Josh to take me under his wing." Dan's longest throw is 32 feet, and he is eager to reach 40 feet by the end of the year.

Six Men Down

How might six players missing from the roster would impact a sports team? It would mean a whole infield in baseball, a whole starting line in basketball plus a substitute, and almost an entire offensive or defensive unit in football. The Ipswich co-op ice hockey team with Rockport and Manchester/Essex learned what it meant first hand. Early this seasons they had an entire line of skaters absent from their bench. In the early games, Ipswich lost several players. All three captains, Kyle Rollins from Ipswich, Anthony Lange from Manchester, and Jameson Kamm from Rockport, were among these players.

Kyle fractured his collarbone playing on his fall hockey team. Anthony dislocated his shoulder playing football for Manchester in the fall. Jameson strained his hip flexor during the first game of the season. On top of the missing captains, Patrick Guinee (Manchester) and Tyler Edmonds (Rockport) both received concussions before the opening game and missed a couple weeks. In addition, Ipswich sophomore Christian Fabbri suffered a serious leg injury which took him out for the season. Unfortunately, this meant the Vikings would face three of the toughest teams in their division with only sixteen of their usual twenty two skaters. Three games where the Vikings took three hard blows to their positivity.

When asked what the Vikings needed to do to turn the season around, head coach Patrick McIntosh said, "The execution needs to be greatly improved. Our players need to step up and reflect the things we work on in practice, in the games. We need to get the puck from stick to stick and play at the level that a varsity hockey team should be playing."

He also commented on the impact the injuries had on those first couple games: "We lost several experienced players and it's forced us to play kids who are less experienced and expect them to play at a varsity level. The speed of the game is so much different."

In the fifth game of the season, the Vikings faced off against their long-time rivals, the Shawsheen Tech Rams. The Rams held first place in the division and left the Vikings with a punishing loss earlier in the season. Four of their six injured had returned and the Vikings came out with a surge of energy and tied the Rams. In the toughest season that the team has seen in recent times, the Vikings showed their will to stay positive and persevere despite the obstacles they faced.

Junior Charlie Koshivas takes down his opponent during a match at Pentucket High School. After Charlie pinned down his victory he went over to celebrate with his supporting teammates.

A Class to Notice

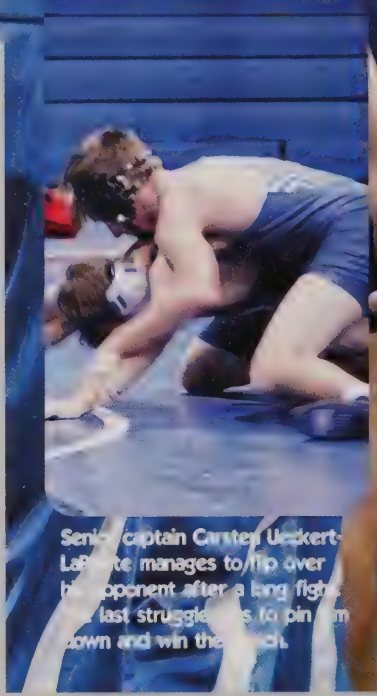
For many athletes sharing a team means sharing the spotlight with another school. But in the case of our 2015-16 Ipswich wrestlers, individuals have found a way to shine.

Every match the boys must power through and to pin their opponent for the win. The boys support each other through wins and losses, even though they may be alone on the mat. "You're by yourself on the mat and when you come off, you're with your team. The only way you can improve is with your team," says junior Josiah Krason. Although the boys lean on each other for support and don't often have a large crowd in the stands, they feed off the cheers to heighten their intensity.

As a somewhat under-recognized team, wrestlers have better reason to fight and earn their wins throughout the season. The boys begin the hard work in their pre-season, and it pays off during the tiring rounds of wrestling.

One of the biggest challenges wrestlers face is making their weight class. Senior captain Carsten Ueckert-LaPlante uses specific training rituals to get down to his weight class before each meet. "Staying in shape is really important, especially eating healthy. I have to stop eating ice cream and a more balanced diet. Cardio becomes really important to prevent you from being tired when you're on the mat, because you are constantly moving." Two pounds can make a huge difference, considering the weight classes go up by seven pounds in their division.

Whether its breaking a hole, going for that pin, or losing that last pound, that is the will power that gets the boys noticed.



Senior captain Carsten Ueckert-LaPlante manages to flip over his opponent after a long fight. His last struggle was to pin him down and win the match.

Experienced Success

Many varsity sports rely on their upperclassmen to be strong leaders. But the 2015-16 gymnastics team has proven that the underclassmen of IHS have just what they need to put on a good performance.

The gymnastics team has had a strong season thus far, staying consistent with only a few freshmen and sophomores. The five girls have teamed up with Gloucester and represent Ipswich well. These girls bring a strong sense of responsibility to the mat. "I get nervous usually, but it's a lot of adrenaline and really exciting," says freshman Ava Warren.

Facing upperclassmen on other teams might be intimidating to some. The expectation that the older girls have more practice and experience than the underclassmen is a common mistake. Many of the girls have had all the practice they need to face older girls. " I was six years old when I started gymnastics," says sophomore Aisha Gahm-Diaz. The talented girls deliver competitive routines, challenging even the most veteran opponents.

During competitions, the girls embody the integrity and strength all gymnasts require. They show elegance in their floor routines and captivate the judges with dance. Their beam routines show flexibility, strength, and balance. Whether tumbling, dancing, or vaulting, these girls are proof positive that age is just a number.

A New Kind of Semi

The Ipswich High School semi-formal this year was a new take on semi. In past years semi formal has been a freshman-sophomore dance located at the town hall. This year, however, the freshman and sophomore class officers took it upon themselves to make it a more enjoyable night. Moving Semi to a function hall and hiring a company to deejay made the event feel more like the Cotillion. The sophomore class said it was much more fun than last year, making the changes worth the money and effort.

Killin' It at Cotillion

The Ipswich High School Cotillion at Ipswich Country Club was a formal affair including dinner, dancing, and fun. Most girls find cotillion much less stressful than prom, but still enjoy the thrill of putting on fancy dresses and taking pictures. "Getting ready with all my friends is just as much of a production as it was for prom, but there wasn't any added stress about the promenade." For any students who haven't experienced prom, cotillion is a great introduction to prom season.

Getting Groovey

On May 8th, 2015 the class of 2016 rocked the dance floor at the Hellenic Center in Ipswich. Students in dazzling dresses and suits swept across the floor all night long. In typical fashion students scarfed down delicious appetizers, including food, soda, and cupcakes throughout the night. As she recalled her evening Jourdan Gauthier said, " I raced home after school to get my hair done and then went to my friend Savs' house to get my makeup done. While we got ready we talked about other people's dresses and her experiences at prom." Although Jourdan didn't know what to expect, she wasn't nervous about going. The most nerve-racking part about the whole ordeal for Kendall Trepanier was, "Walking out during promenade because I knew I would probably trip or smile like an Idiot. I was nervous getting ready because I wanted everything to be perfect. I kept thinking, what if I don't look good?"

High Hopes, New Slopes

In 2012 Mr. Dalton moved up from assistant principal to principal. With this change a new assistant principal came into town, Mr. Jeff Carovillano. In the same year newcomer Carovillano developed the Ski and Snowboard Club. His idea of for the club came from his old school, Melrose High School.

As a kid Carovillano enjoyed body boarding along the Jersey Shore. Whenever he got the opportunity to snowboard with his family and friends he would take it. For Carovillano, skiing was a way to get to know his students outside the classroom. It wasn't long before IHS he decided to take them to shred down mountains.

In the second year of the Ski and Snowboard Club Mr. Carovillano asked seniors Vince Skelton and John Ross, then sophomores, to be Co-Presidents of the club. "I chose Vince Skelton and John Ross as Co-Presidents because of their enthusiasm for skiing," Carovillano says. When asked about being Co-President of the Ski and Snowboard club Ross said, "I've really enjoyed it. It has been a lot of fun planning the trips and going on them."

Skelton, who has Cerebral Palsy, started skiing in eighth grade. It all began after he was introduced to a Loon Mountain non-profit organization, New England Disabled Sports (NEDS), by John Ross and his family. John, an adaptive coach for the past four years, has had some great experiences at NEDS. "I've met a lot of new people and have had many great experiences over the past four years," Ross recalls. He was also the reason Skelton finally tried skiing. "I knew he (Vince) would have a lot of fun, even though it took a lot of convincing." It took John and his family four years to convince Skelton to start skiing.

Carovillano has been utterly impressed with Vince and John's dedication to skiing outside of school club days. "I think that program is really impressive. It's been awesome for them. I'm really pleased their families participate in that. I think it has given Vince some incredible opportunities."

After just a few years of skiing for fun, Skelton started ripping through gates for NEDS. In March of his junior year he was invited to compete in the Paralympic Alpine Skiing National Championship, in the skilled events (Giant Slalom and Slalom). "My dream is to compete on the Paralympic National Team in the future," Skelton says.

Until then Ross and Skelton will continue to enjoy family and club trips. "It has been a lot of fun over the past three years, but I think there are many ways to improve it," Ross said when asked about the ski club. The first two years of the club they only ran one successful trip due to the lack of interest and fulfillment of the bus.

After a lackluster start the club has grown considerably. Snowboarder Jack Ruhland has been in the club throughout his high school career. "It's a great idea, get everyone out there and have a good time." Before joining the club Jack spent considerable time boarding on his own. "I lived in Vermont. Winters there are freezing, so one might as well make the best of it." Even though club trips are a blast Jack prefers to hit the slopes "As often as possible." I love learning new tricks and slamming," he says.

Junior snowboarder Ethan Como, who joined the ski club its second year, started snowboarding because "I saw my older brother try it so I wanted to try it." One of the reason he likes riding is unlike most sports "You don't need to follow any rules," Como said.

For Ethan and most people, a big part of skiing and riding is ripping down mountains with your friends. "I look forward to snowboarding at Loon because there is a high possibility we will." Ethan has never been to Loon Mountain, in Lincoln New Hampshire, and Carovillano has been trying since the club began to get there. "Many of the kids in the ski club enjoy going to Loon Mountain so we though it would be nice to run a trip there," Carovillano said.

Although the ski and snowboard club hasn't been around for a while they hope to continue building their membership and ripping down mountains. This year they plan to run Friday night trips at either Bradford or Gunstock. With record snowfall predicted again this winter, there's little doubt the allure of fresh powder and groomed trails will entice many students to join their ranks.

Gabriele Aprea

Between Two Oceans

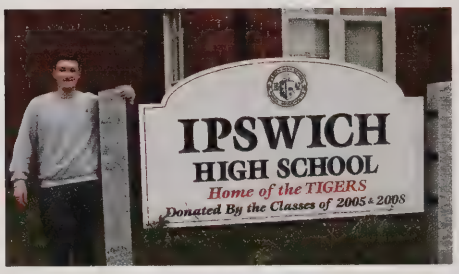
Although his life began on a small island off the coast of Italy, Gabriele Aprea found himself at the shores of a new ocean this fall. A student from a small Italian island called Sardinia, Gabri embarked on an exciting journey to Ipswich through the rotary exchange program.

The first major difference between Sardinia and Ipswich was clear to Gabri: "Everything is more fresh, the bread, the pizza, and the meat," which is what he misses most about home.

He also said his school is alot different in Italy. He pointed out that "We go to school six days a week for 5 hours a day," and, "We stay in the same classroom all day and the teachers move from classroom to classroom."

Although the Crane Estate is beautiful, one of the things he misses most about home are the beaches. "Sardinia has beautiful beaches with crystal clear water, a lot different from here." His most memorable experience was when he went to see a Celtics game at The Garden, followed by a Revolution game at Gillette Stadium.

Nick Imm



That's Not My Name

Nick Imm, commonly know as "Nick fromMalta," is a student who is fully engaged in life here in America. When Nick arrived many people referred to him as "Nick fromMalta". The name continued to stick and many people actually thought this was his last name. Nick said "the most common question I got was; is your last name actually FromMalta?"

Nick also highlighted many cultural differences. He said "the food is a lot better here in the U.S.". However nick does miss home, he said "I miss my family, and the warm water back in malta" Nick explained that much of Malta is undeveloped and there is smaller populations. Nick said "There is a lot more crowds here in the U.S." Overall Nick has enjoyed his experience here, but misses home.

Nick also explained the role of IHS student Matt Collyer, whose family took Nick in for the year. Nick said: "having Matt there was an advantage, I feel like I made friends fast." Nick made many new friends which he will definitely miss once he returns to Malta.

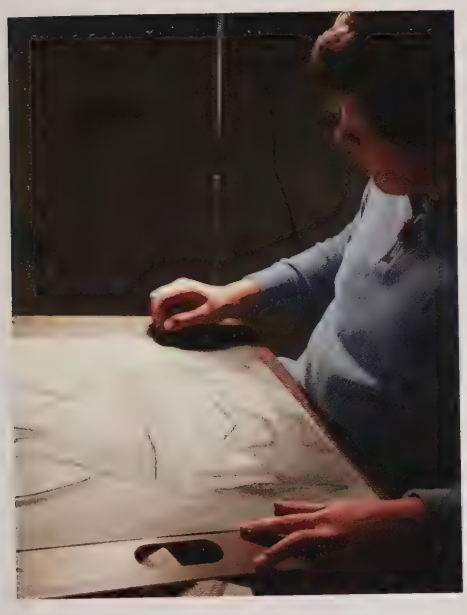
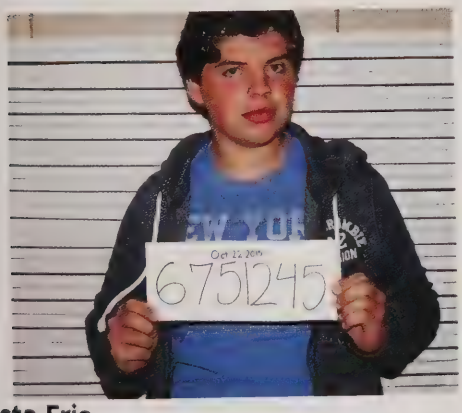
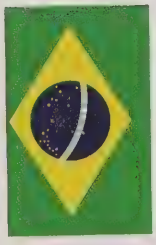
Gabriel Passarelli







Esta Frio

Gabriel's first week in United States was "The worst week of my life." When he arrived to the school, through a program called Educatius, Gabriel said, "It took me a week to adjust." After that week, however, Gabriel began to make friends, figure out his locker combo, and find his classrooms. He couldn't get over how all the pods looked the same, which was utterly confusing.

A native Brazilian, Gabe often walked around in giant coats in our 70 degree weather. He said, "I knew it was warm for everyone else but I was freezing." Gabe is use to 90 degree weather year round. One experience Gabe will never forget was the first time he stepped into the waters of Ipswich. Gabe said, "The beach was very crowded and everyone was in the water, but when I stepped in I couldn't feel my feet."

Some of Gabriel's most memorable moments came on fall Friday nights. He explained, "The football games with cheerleaders and all the excitement were like something out of the movies." Academics also came very easy to gabe here in the U.S. He said "It seems like I'm doing the same math I did in third and fourth grade in Brazil." One of Gabe's biggest academic challenges was his English class.

Elisa Ruha

It Looked a Lot Better on Google Earth

Elisa came to the United States from Finland with no fear at all. She was not scared about participating in the exchange program. To her it was "Just five months of my time. I knew it wasn't a permanent stay." She was excited to see what it would be like after exploring Ipswich on the internet.

"After getting informational papers, the first thing I did was search Ipswich on Google Earth," Elisa said. After living here a while, she concluded: " It looked a lot better on Google Earth."

Spirit Week was a new experience for Elisa. She explained how the noise and excitement was something she wouldn't have expected at school. She also enjoyed homecoming. "It was a fun time, and I enjoyed the music," she said.

Elisa explained how cheering helped her adjust. She also "Met a lot of friends while switching classes. In Finland we stay in the same room all day." Elisa also made it clear that Ipswich had a much nicer schools: "This school is a lot better looking. In Finland my school is very old." Although it looked more visually appealing on Google Earth, Elisa definitely enjoyed her time in Ipswich, and will miss the friends she made.

New Era

Changes in a routine that has been the same for many years can have a big impact on the performance and the cooperativeness of the students. Mr.Seapy, however has not let the talent of the band fall through. Being the former Ipswich High School Orchestra Director, Mr.Seapy filled the shoes of Mr.Dolan, who taught for more than 30 years. Mr.Seapy's influence for a musical career was influenced by early childhood experiences. Growing up in Oman he was heavily influenced by his instructors. His first musical instrument was the piano. He was taught and instructed by an "American lady who lived down the street". Moving to the United States a couple of years later, he attended middle school and took part in his first band class. Mr.Seapy, however was not very fond of his director, he always aspired to make sure he would be a better director than his teachers in the past. The transition between two instructors seemed to be almost flawless, as Mr.Seapy describes it, "From my perspective- is that I think we're very similar, we both have very high musical standards" . The band has had a chance to expand their knowledge on music theory and what excellence in playing an instrument is. Although new routines have been introduced to the students, unfortunately for most of them the weekly tradition of WEEPS has been passed on. Mr.Seapy stresses the importance of his position in the band, he believes "Our primary job is to teach music and not be a band director". And although this band is very different from inner city schools, He believes there is "Strength in numbers". Mr.Seapy hopes to have a great and positive career in Ipswich High School, and to bring knowledge and inspiration to all his students.

The Final Notes

Doing something you love for the last time is always bittersweet. The last rehearsal, the last walk on stage, the last song ever performed: These are all things seniors Shanelle Taylor and Molly Stedman reflect back on with a sense of nostalgia. Preparing for the last show, Shanelle says director Patch really pushed them to make sure the pieces would be "great, rather than just good." Knowing it was their last time on stage, both of the girls agreed that while it was sad, they felt very ready. On singing those last few notes, Molly recalls feeling "kind of sad, just because we'll never really get the opportunity to be on that stage singing the same songs as we did before." Unfortunately, all great things must come to an end and Shanelle says she's going to miss the great bonds she made with the members of chorus above all.

Both of these groups meet once a week after school, and once a week during directed to rehearse and hone their voices. Over the years they have built what will no doubt become a lasting legacy, and many enduring memories.

Performing in front of one's peers is a challenge. In addition to a strong work ethic, Canto and Chambers singers must be very brave. But they know they aren't alone. They stand with each other. Not only do they have each other, they have their dedicated choral director for support and guidance throughout the year. Senior Sofia Gadbois says: "We've all really loved being able to have Mr. Patch as our choral director. He's taught us so much and has supported us through our musical education. We are really lucky to have him and it's sad to say our goodbyes."

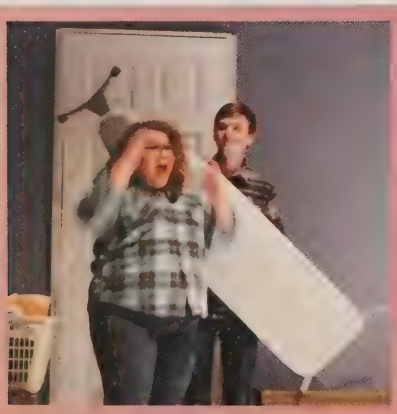
Capturing the Story



Almost, Maine! is a fantastic series of love stories. On a cold, clear moonless night in the middle of winter, all is not quite what it seems in the remote, mythical town of Almost, Maine. As the northern lights hover in the star-filled sky above, Almost's residents find themselves falling in and out of love in unexpected and often hilarious ways. Knees are bruised. Hearts are broken. But the bruises heal, and the hearts mend - almost - in this delightful midwinter night's dream.

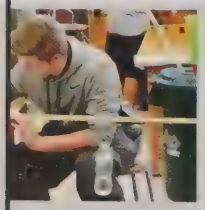
Trebuchet Projec

The word trebuchet comes from the Middle French verb "trebutch," meaning tumble or fall over. The history of the trebuchet dates all the way back to the 12th century, and could fling projectiles up to 350 pounds at enemy fortifications. The trebuchet was used up to the 15th century, well after the discovery of gunpowder.
During the 12th century the trebuchet was a high tech piece of machinery. However, due to the advent of gunpowder, the trebuchet amounts to little more than a perfect building lesson for Mr. Gallant's Engineering II class in today's world.

Mr. Gallant's Engineering II class decided to make two trebuchets. Although they used modern power tools and followed a blueprint, Gallant's class took about two and a half weeks to build their smaller scale versions of the weapons. While the lessons on leverage and force were valuable, students learned to respect their forbears who normally spent three or four days to build such powerful machines in the 12th century.



RC Racing

What do Charlotte, North Carolina, Dallas, Texas have in common? They are both places the Ipswich RC Racing team has competed in the National Student Racing Challenge. Over the past four years they have gone to nationals all over the country.

Given a small budget at the beginning of the semester, the teams order parts and build their individual cars. In order to pay for their expenses, the race teams raked leaves in the fall. Each team puts their car through rigorous testing and time trials, fine tuning steering and motor controls in the process. The result: precision tuned, fast moving cars flying through the halls and parking lots without their racing bodies attached.

This year all three race teams will be traveling to nationals, which are being held in beautiful Miami, Florida. Having never been to nationals, Nick Canzano is "Looking forward to the race competition and becoming closer with my teammates." How do they make it to nationals every year? The key to all their success is: "It's a class as opposed to a club," said Drew Beaulieu.

The Craftsmanship

Shed Project

Most of us spend a lifetime accumulating stuff. For some, this becomes a problem. Where do we put it? The answer for many people with lots of stuff is a shed. As more and more equipment began to accumulate at the end of Main Street, it was clear we needed more space. Engineering II decided to tackle this problem on behalf of the custodial staff.

In order to make space and maintain a clear pathway to the doors at the back of the building, the shed had to hold the fleet of snow blowers and the Sail Program hotdog cart. In years prior the snowblowers and hotdog cart were stored in the garage by the drama department taking up valuable prop and costume space.

Custodian Dick Tubbs might appreciate the project more than most, but he believes "The shed will help everyone because it clears up so much space." The shed took first and second period Engineering classes about two and a half months to build. According to Alex Morris the hardest part of building the shed was: "Laying the foundation and setting up the walls." The shed project is probably the most helpful project the engineering class has ever built.

Robotics

In only their second year as a club, the Robotics team has grown considerably. Consisting of Annabelle Platt, Liliana Acevedo, Isabelle Schell, Lorna Burdick, Filip Kernan, Sean Mellow, Chris Phillips, Noura Rayes, Heather Nelson, Alyssa Mossler, Aaron Eldrige, Alex Mootafian, Peyton Fitzgerald, Josh Dumont, Patrick Mattin, Alec Kneedler, Roman Gadbois, Justin Foye, Austin Fitzgerald, Kendra Williams, Lucas Goldsmith, and George Gallagher, the team is tasked with a build.

This year the Robotics team was given an unusual challenge: build a "medieval robot." With six weeks to complete the robot, the team had to work together from design to final build. At the final competition the team's work was scrutinized by a panel of judges. Categories range from mobility to articulation. The final competition varies year to year, but this one may take the unusual form of a joust. When asked, Roman Gadbois thought the team would be successful: "I am confident that we will do well," he said.

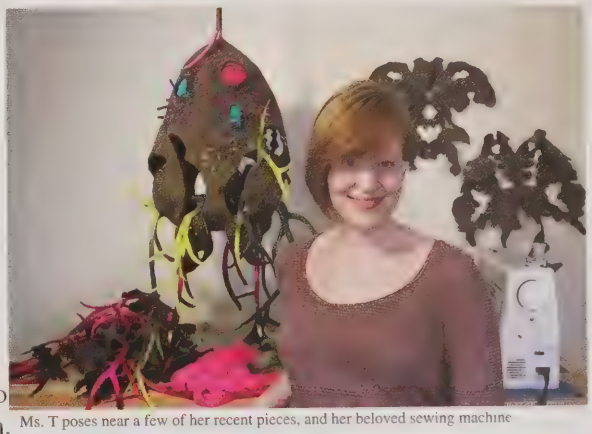
The Fibers of Our Being



Ms. T poses near a few of her recent pieces, and her beloved sewing machine

Many people let reality pass them by, but a few pay attention and capture it memorably. IHS Art teacher Mrs. Thistlethwaite has always been enthralled by the process of turning her reality into something tangible.

Although Mrs. Thistlethwaite grew up in a household where art was valued, her middle and high schools did not have the opportunities in art that suited her; so she stopped creating. In college she picked up art and started to pursue her dream again.

Mrs. Thistlethwaite decided to be an art teacher when she realized how unfortunate it was that she didn't have an opportunity for art as a teen. Because of this, she decided to design curriculum for all students. According to Mrs. T, "I believe every student has the capability to make good art, and should be involved in art for themselves and the community." Many people envision cliche paintings and photographs when art comes to mind. But Mrs. T feels more comfortable expressing herself through a different medium.

Using fibers or textiles, Mrs. Thistlethwaite creates sculptures, or to sews and weaves with them. She is inspired by three artists: William Morris, Louise Bourgeois, and Michel Gondry. All three artists differ from each other except for one important way: they value traditional craft, the type of art Mrs. T pursues.

Mrs. Thistlethwaite's love for traditional craft has earned her some recognition. During her college years, she displayed her art around the campus of the Boston Museum School. More recently, Mrs. Thistlethwaite had her very own art show at her church and displayed her work at an art fundraiser within her town. Currently, her art is personal. In addition to professional inspiration, her students give her ideas every day. Sometimes during class, Mrs. Thistlethwaite will throw an undeveloped project idea at her students and watch what they create. From this, she can build new inspiration.

In the end, being an art teacher is more about sharing ideas and inspiring one another, than it is about Mrs. Thistlethwaite telling students how to create it. Sometimes, she will post some of her work on Instagram where you can share ideas or just post pictures you enjoy. Currently, Mrs. Thistlethwaite is working on a sculpture made of wool felt which she claims is "her favorite piece she has created so far."

The Fantastic Foursome

Before taking on the 7th grade dance Jill Cox, Caitlyn Scola, Sarah Wallis, and Sydney Law (below) line up on Jill's staircase. These fine ladies planned to take over the dance floor, as revealed by their ear to ear smiles. When asked how she felt before the dance, Sydney said, "I was so excited to be with my friends but I was also nervous because I didn't know if anyone would ask me to slow dance."

Capturing

Growth

Remember when... Alex Morris ran into the swing set during a game of flag football but still managed to catch the ball and score for a touchdown? Who would ever have thought he would later be the wide receiver on the varsity football team for Ipswich?

Remember when... Peter Pappas hung from the ceiling and Mrs. Gregory walked in? Little did we know he would be able to touch the same ceiling while standing flat footed by his senior year.

Remember when... Table-topping was the funniest prank pulled every day? These days, we would likely end up with a lawsuit and an appointment with Officer Perna for pulling that nonsense.

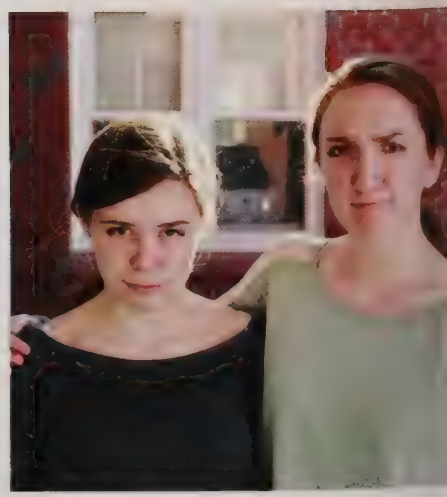
Then...

Remember when...

Liam Sullivan was everyone's lawyer? To this day, he is still arguing with everybody, including all the teachers.

Remember when...

Kristoff Robson wore gloves every day? Look how far we've come. Now he only wears is his Minecraft sweatshirt every day.



Remember when...

There was a manhunt planned every weekend but they never actually happened? Now there are just "movies" and "fires" that are planned but never really happen.

Remember when...

Four square was banned because everyone was too competitive? Now, we all compete for the most laps on the pacer run in Gardy's class.

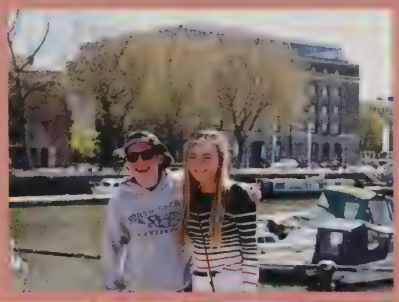
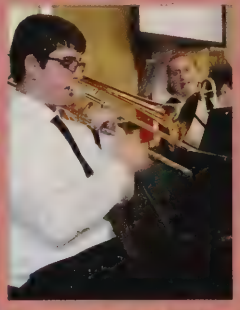
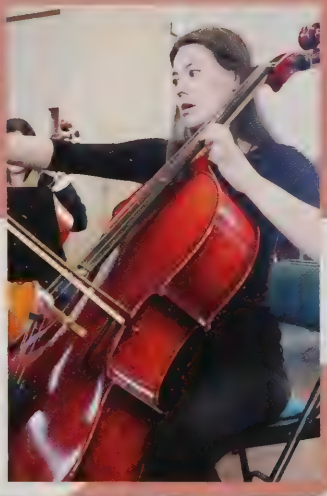
2015 England

Hard Work Pays Off

The students of the band orchestra, and chorus worked especially hard all year to prepare for the extraordinary experience in England. The hard work prepared each group to put on flawless concerts in the UK.







An Unforgettable Trip

During April vacation of 2015, the band, orchestra, and chorus traveled across the "pond" to England, where they toured around the country and performed at two locations. They had great audiences which appreciated each piece of music they performed. Although this trip was planned for the music, this group of musicians and chaperons learned about the history of Shakespeare's hometown, and the modern day culture of the Camden Markets. This was surely a trip none of these students will ever forget.

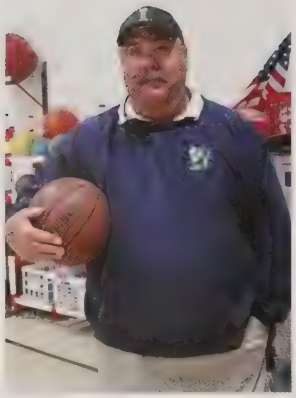
Out With a Bang

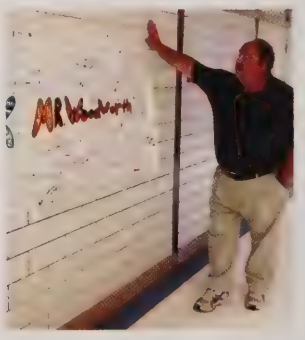
Our beloved band director, Mr. Dolan, retired at the end of the 2014-2015 school year, having made a lasting impact on the community. The final concert in England was the last opportunity for Mr. Dolan to conduct his band in front of an audience before he handed his baton, and beloved students off to Mr. Seapy .

Doug Woodworth

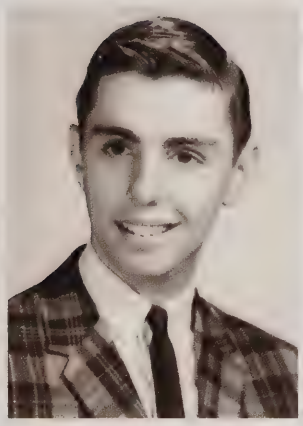


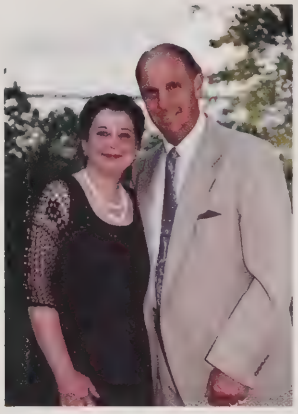
One in a Million

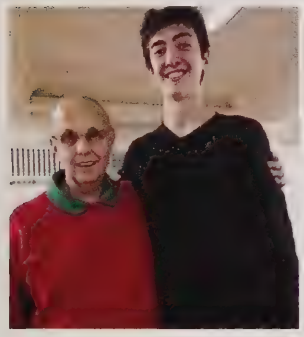
Doug Woodworth was a beloved member of the Ipswich community. He went to great lengths to be a part of his students' lives. Mr. Woodworth was an elementary physical education teacher, a softball coach, a basketball coach, and our inspiration. Mr. Woodworth touched the lives of many students from Ipswich High School. Doug will always be remembered for one of his favorite quotes: "It's not about the size of the dog in the fight, it's about the size of the fight in the dog".

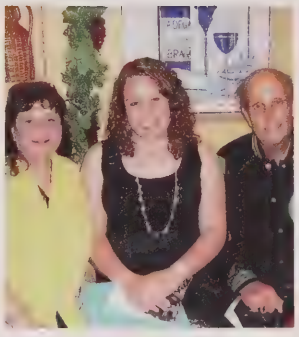


John Yeannakopoulos









Smiles for Miles

Few people would argue they are more proud to be from Ipswich than John Yeannakopoulos was. He embodied what it meant to be part of a community, sharing his heart with generations of students and countless sports teams. Whether it was a crazy costume during spirit week or a passing greeting in the hallway, he always brought a smile to your face. "Yean" knew everyone and everyone knew him. Those of us who were fortunate enough to have Yean in our lives will never forget his spirit and his passion for Ipswich.

Congratulations on your graduation and good luck in college. We love you and are so proud of you!!

Kerrie Leann Janvrin

We are all so proud of you Kerrie! It's amazing how fast these years have gone by. We miss the little girl you use to be but are so proud of what a beautiful, kind, smart woman you have become. The way you never let anything stop you will get you far in life. Remember to always be happy and follow your dreams! You deserve only the best and should always seek it! We can't wait to see what your future holds. Congrats and we love you!

MICHAELA HEDDERMAN

KK – You are amazing, not only in your many achievements, but in how strong you have become, how persistently you have worked to overcome obstacles, and how you have taken disappointments in stride and pushed through any barrier. You are our sunshine, our spirited and beautiful baby girl. We are so very proud of the woman you have become and will continue to be! No matter what the naysayers say, if you think you can, you will! Always believe in you! You are deeply, deeply loved, always. Mom and Dad

CONGRATULATIONS MICHAELA! Keep running, keep reading, and keep reciting poetry—we can't wait to see what you achieve in the years to come. All our love, Uncle Rich and Robin

Congratulations KK! I am so proud of you and for having you as a big sister. Thank you for taking care of me. I will miss you at college (although I won't be late anymore for school! LOL) Good Luck next year! I love you, Sean

Great Job Michaela! Congratulations and best of luck! Uncle David

Congratulations Michaela! Remember to stay the course in your future endeavors as you have in the past. Opportunity will knock but remember to open the door to take advantage of it. Our best to you always. We love you very much.
Nan & Pop

Way to go Michaela! Best of luck! We are all so proud of you!! Aunt Pauline, Jane & Allen, Jamie & Michael, Susan & Winnie

Wake up every day with an attitude of gratitude. Be thankful for all you have and for those in your life that love and support you no matter what. Plan for the future but be present. There is only life in the present moment. Make the most of it. See the good in every situation, even the bad ones, for in those times of struggle are lessons to be learned. Learn them and apply them to your life and you will always be on the right track. See beauty in everything. It will enrich your life. Stay positive and remember, you are healthy, wealthy and loved. And lastly, be kind, always, for everyone you meet is battling something you know nothing about. Cheers to you. Now go out and get what you want. Your possibilities are endless. Love Kate Congratulations Michaela! The best is yet to come! We are very proud of you! Love Uncle Pat and Brennan.

Follow your dreams, do what you love and happiness will be yours. Congratulations Michaela! All our love, Carrie, Danny, Carylann and Finnan

I enjoyed watching a cute, energetic little girl grow up to be a beautiful, accomplished young lady. I am very proud of you and the best is yet to come!! Congratulations, Best of luck in the future! Uncle Tim

It is not the critic who counts;

*not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes up short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who, at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory nor defeat.

Theodore Roosevelt, April 23, 1910
